Seventh grader David Long eyes the piles of books he will be using during his three years at Fairfield.

During the period of formal education in every person's life, there are many factors which guide him in the direction of the goals he has set for himself.

Each day in his school life, the student is unconsciously developing his goals. His relations with friends and classmates in such common places as the cafeteria or the five-minute passing time between classes are molding his life into the type of person he will become.

By means of textbooks, teachers, teaching aids, and activities, graduates of Fairfield can fully develop themselves if they take advantage of the education they are offered.

Fairfielders

The halls of Fairfield become a sea of activity as students pass from one class to another. This scene was taken in the foyer between fifth and sixth periods.

Decisions! Decisions! Decisions! Students have a choice of some twenty after-school activities from which to choose.

News and gossip are exchanged as ninth graders gather in the cafeteria at lunchtime.

Embark On Sea Of Education

Dave Junk, Pam MacDonald, Monette Beery, and Steve Adams enter the main entrance of Fairfield in preparation for another day of class. Some 600 students were enrolled this past year.

Supervising the overall school operation of Fairfield Junior High is Mr. James Richardson. This capable administrator has served as principal since the school was opened in 1962. The modern facilities include some 20 classrooms with an enrollment of more than 600 students.

Ship's Officers Set The Course

Mr. Arthur Schwab, staff assistant, can often be seen in the halls answering the many questions of junior high students. Assisting the principal and faculty members are also included in his many duties.

Crew Members Lend Assistance

Helping with major or minor problems of students and staff is one way Mrs. Johnson serves the school.

Keeping school records and handling correspondence are part of Mrs. Fredrick's daily duties.

Rooms and halls were always in order and mechanical difficulties were quickly solved by the competent staff of custodians.

The lunch period is a break in the activities of Fairfielders. Providing wholesome and nutritious meals is the tremendous task of the qualified staff of cooks.

Faculty members take time out from their busy schedule to enjoy an after-school get-together.

Both French and Latin are included in the foreign language program. Recognize the pledge of allegiance in French?

Fui-Fuisti-Fuit! Mrs. Tyler's ninth graders exhibit their skill in Latin in this chalkboard demonstration.

Passengers' Daily Schedule

Fairfield's educational program is designed to give students the best education available. Pupils are provided with interesting textbooks, supplemented with audio-visual equipment.

The photographs on the following pages summarize the daily class activities at Fairfield Junior High. These informal pictures show students engaged in various class activities and some of the projects in which they have participated. The Voyager has included scenes from the math, language, science, English, and other departments.

At Fairfield, students are encouraged to cultivate their abilities from an academic standpoint. For its students, Fairfield stands as a guidepost for learning and developing ideas. Students are encouraged to cultivate new ideas through the education afforded them.

Eighth grade language arts students listen attentively as this member gives an oral book report.

Great Expectations is a familiar story to all ninth graders who cleverly recreated Dickens' times in London, England, through projects and characterizations.

Nouns, verbs, and prepositions! All are included in the study of sentence construction in eighth grade developmental language classes.

Under the direction of Mr. Whetzel, the boys in industrial arts have furthered their skill in wood-working.

Many of the fashions seen in Fairfield's halls were stitched in home economics class.

In Mrs. Steckler's health class, students study the construction and proper care of the human body.

Seventh grade home arts students combine their talents in do-it-yourself projects. Mr. Eckart is the teacher.

The telephone is no mystery to most teenagers but in science class it becomes a challenge as they are faced with learning its technical parts.

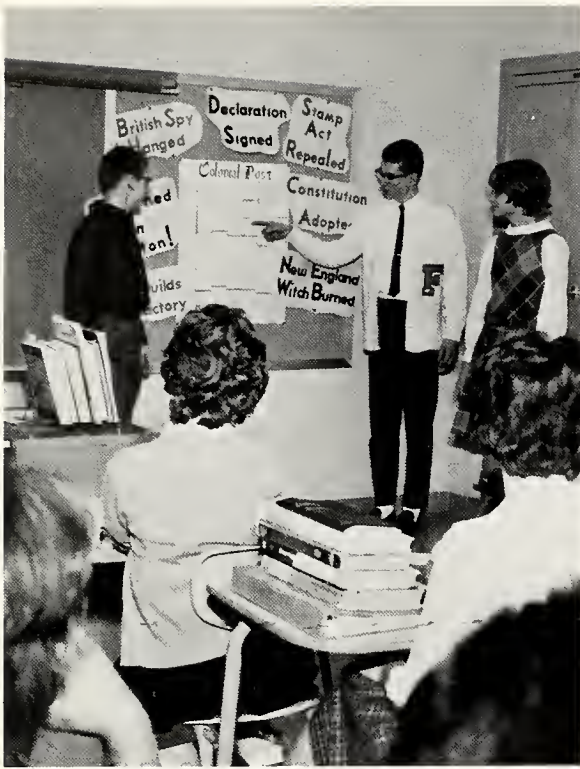

The value of x and y are often solved with the aid of audio-visual equipment. This scene shows Mr. Stauffer's ninth grade algebra class.

Is it type A or type O? Ask these ninth grade biology students! The girls devised their own blood testing unit and demonstrated their do-it-yourself project in Mr. Partridge's biology class.

History students pooled their journalistic talents to produce the Colonial Post.

Current history is not forgotten in Mr. Coahran's eighth grade social studies classes.

These ninth graders volunteer their study time to assist in the office. Running errands and operating the duplicating machines are among their duties.

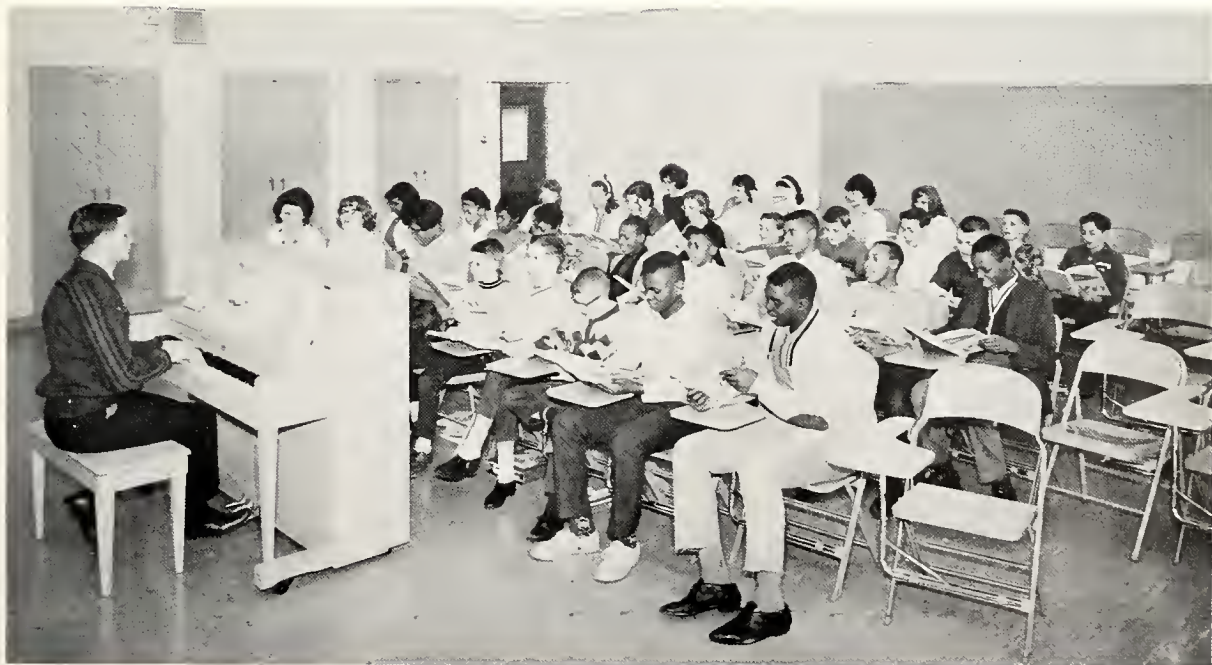

Rembrandt? No! But this ninth grader is learning the technique of painting a still life.

Physical fitness is each boy's goal as he takes his spills in a tumbling exercise in gym class.

Seventh grade students stretch their vocal cords to demonstrate ability to sing in Mr. Clauser's class.

This group of seventh, eighth, and ninth graders served as the student governing body during the past year. Twenty-two homeroom representatives and eight representatives-at-large made up the Student Council.

Council Members Represent Student Body

Student Council, a very important organization at Fairfield, was established for the well-being of each student. Through it, the student body can express its opinions on various rules and policies. For this reason, the 22 homeroom representatives and eight representatives-at-large were carefully chosen in an all-school vote.

Through its opportunity for service to the school, the Student Council has written a handbook on rules and policies to be given to each pupil entering Fairfield next year. Members also sold candy at the basketball games and planned many of the after-school social functions.

Headed by Mr. Schwab, Fairfield's second Student Council is a great asset to the school.

Student Council officers conferred often with Mr. Schwab, adviser. The officers were Cindy Collins, vice-president; Dave Junk, secretary-treasurer; and Walt Sorg, president.

PIY VALENTINES DAY

Activities

This Improve Your Reading Club member receives individual instructions from Mrs. Long.

These Speech Club students, under the direction of Mrs. Gliniecki, are learning the art of public speaking.

Ideas are expressed in many ways by students participating in Mrs. DeHaven's Art Club.

Some Chose Fine Arts

The history of the Romans and Roman mythology are studied by Mrs. Tyler and her Latin Club members.

Students Are Offered Variety Of Activities

A teenager could be defined as one that finds new horizons, fresh enthusiasms, and has a genuine zest for life. This definition certainly pertains to the many Spartans who bring many original ideas and outlooks to classes and outside activities.

Teenagers find many ways to use their talents and energy, and for this reason, recreation plays a great role in the life of a youth. Fairfield not only influences its students by affording academic possibilities, but also provides for pupils' recreational interests. Some 20 clubs have been formed to meet the interests of the students. These activities are sponsored by the Spartan faculty, but the students are the officers and planners of many of the clubs. The responsibility of planning and the joy of working with others are but a few of the rewards shared by the club participants.

Machinery holds no mystery for these members of the We'll Do It Ourselves Club. "Be Repaired" is their motto.

Skill in the use of machinery and tools is the aim of the boys in the Industrial Arts Club.

Students in the General Craft Club sharpen their skill in the art of leather craft, under the direction of Mrs. Sams and Mrs. Hunter.

These seventh, eighth, and ninth graders are responsible for our monthly school newspaper, The Falcon. They carefully report and record sports, news, and honors occurring at Fairfield.

Service Clubs Aid Faculty, Students

Through their expert workmanship and co-operation, these students have given you the yearbook that is now in your hands.

Booster Club members are usually found wherever and whenever help is needed. Assisting both faculty and students is the prime purpose of the club. The group is sponsored by Mr. Rodey.

"Roll 'em!" is a familiar term to Audio-Visual Club members. Learning to operate the technical equipment properly is part of their training under Mr. Stauffer.

Future librarians gain experience by working part time in the library. Some 2,500 volumes are available for student use.

Fairfield's choir, under the direction of Mr. Clauser, entertained at many school functions this year.

The 60-voice choir includes eighth and ninth graders.

Music For Everyone

Fairfield's musicians combine their talents in our 16-piece orchestra. Mr. West is the director.

Future choir members gain experience in the seventh grade training choir.

A career in education is the goal of these students in the Future Teachers Club. Mr. Eckart is the sponsor.

Hunt and peek developed into the touch system for students in the Typing Club. Mrs. Schang and Mrs. Sell sponsored the group.

Our 36-piece band has become a favorite part of Fairfield's activities this past year. The group, which is directed by Mr. West, has entertained at both concerts and home basketball games.

The ancient art of pyramid building is practiced by these ninth graders in girls intramurals.

Intramurals For Sports Enthusiasts

An enthusiastic sport of seventh and eighth grade girls intramurals is volleyball.

Boys in seventh and eighth grade intramurals work off their excess energy in a fast game of volleyball.

Basketball rates high as a competitive sport in ninth grade boys intramurals.

The Math Club, which is under the direction of Mr. Petty, digs further into the world of facts and figures.

Sciences Attract Many Students

Students in the International Relations Club, sponsored by Mr. Deaton, learn more of teenagers in distant lands through the exchange of letters.

Mr. Coahran, who sponsors the History Club, directs students towards further knowledge of their country's history.

Miss Brosier and students in the Science Club probe into the various fields of science. Mr. Partridge and Miss Fox are co-sponsors of the group.

The varsity team proudly displays the runner-up trophy following a hard-fought game against Northwood in the finals of the junior high tournament. Mr. Stauffer coached the ninth grade Spartans during the 1963-64 basketball season.

Fairfield Takes Runner-up Trophy At Tourney

Fairfield's Spartans had another fine basketball team this year, taking the runner-up position during the varsity tournament. Although our ninth grade team had a slow start in the season, the boys got sparked up during tournament play, defeating Franklin and Kekionga before falling to Northwood in the finals.

Our seventh and eighth grade basketball team did exceptionally well during the regular season, losing only to Central and Franklin. Our reserve team was defeated in the semi-finals in a closely fought game with Central.

Our varsity football team shared the second place position with Northwood and Kekionga at the end of a fine season.

It is only our second year and again our tough ninth-grade football team took a second-place tie in city competition. Our Spartans were under the able leadership of Mr. Beal and Mr. Partridge. The season shows three wins and three losses.

eighth grade tackle squad. Although they played only one game, they had the important job of preparing and training for next year's team.

Mr. Coahran coached our flag football team, which includes boys in the seventh and eighth grades.

These boys on the flag team have done an excellent job training themselves to become a part of the ninth grade varsity squad.

The ninth grade girls root our team to victory during a home game in the Spartan gymnasium.

These Girls Led Our Teams Into Action

During this past basketball season Fairfield's fighting Spartans have been led by our talented cheerleaders. The cheerleaders were selected in the middle of October and were trained by Mrs. Sell. They practiced twice a week from then until our first game.

The ninth grade cheerleaders demonstrate one of their cheers.

We are all familiar with them because of their intense efforts to spark our teams to victory. These cheerleaders have put their time and energy into becoming a success and from what we have seen this year, the extra time has not been wasted.

These cheerleaders helped our eighth grade team to many victories.
